COVID-19 precautions still a necessity in Wright County

> BY KIM DEMORY EDITOR

egeagle@goldfieldaccess.net

As the State of Iowa, along with the entire nation, tries to get back to a "new normal" way of life, Iowa Specialty Hospital is reminding people that they still need to be proactive in protecting themselves against COVID-19. It is a very real concern and it needs to be treated as such, especially now with businesses, restaurants, theaters and more being allowed to open back up to the public.

"All of the precautions that were put in place in late March in our area are actually more useful now," said Dr. Michael McLoughlin with Iowa Specialty Hospital. "Now is when there is community spread of COVID-19 that we have no idea how the patient acquired it."

Last week, Wright County was identified as one of the top three "hot spots" in Iowa (see separate story in this week's edition) for COVID. But despite the rising numbers of positive cases and exposures to the highly contagious disease, many people have become lax on the use of masks and social distancing as things continue to open up.

Iowa Specialty Hospital reports that they have had seven hospitalized patients with COVID and one of them was Life Flighted to another facility for treatment.

"If everyone would wear a mask and decrease contact with others, this would decrease the spread forcing the disease to die out. But it only works if everyone does it," said Dr. McLoughlin. "The one thing I wish I could really get people to understand is that if everyone did nothing more than wear a mask, we could decrease the spread of COVID by as much as 90%. When a mask is worn, the particles can't spread as far and aren't able to enter the mucous membranes of others (eyes, nose, mouth). Doing this one thing, wearing a mask, would make a huge dent alone."

On a positive note, Dr. McLoughlin also mentioned that they are seeing good results with convalescent plasma in patients that do have COVID. He explained that this is simply taking the liquid part of the blood from a previously infected person and giving it to a patient who is currently infected. When your body is exposed to a foreign pathogen, your body's response is to produce antibodies. However in a sick individual, this can take time. When a patient is given convalescent plasma, the antibodies in the donated plasma can recognize the infection and help the patient fight the virus quicker. He also said that plasma treatment is actually a fairly common medical practice for some other diseases and so we know it's safe.

Iowa Specialty Hospital doctors and staff strongly ourage you to be mindful of proper precautions - only go out if it is necessary, social distance, avoid large gatherings, wear a mask, wash your hands often, and stay home if you're sick.

If everyone did nothing

Vinnette Frank, PA-C at Iowa Specialty Hospital added, "We're seeing an increase of patients returning to the ER for issues that are non-emergent. If you have an issue that can be handled in a clinic setting, please call your provider's office. Often many of those items could be taken care through a telehealth visit so you don't have to be seen onsite at the hospital. Not only is this convenient, it keeps you in a safe environment – your own home."

What would you do if you knew you couldn't What could be accomplished if we all took this mindset? What would we all be willing to try? Would we step out of our comfort zones and finally just go for it and pursue that dream that we all think is a little bit unattainable?

Jamie (Horn) Johnston, a 2006 graduate of Eagle Grove High School, has decided she's going to give her dream the best shot of "Making It" that she can. Although it took her two years to first find out how, and then work up the courage to try, she recently put in her application to be part of the hit NBC show, "Making It." Creating original things by hand has become a worldwide phenomenon, and this show captures that passion of people who dream big and work small, creating masterpieces of all sorts from their homes. It challenges them to test their abilities in a variety of undertakings from weekto-week. Amy Poehler and Nick Offerman have hosted two seasons thus far. Johnston is hoping to be a part of the third.

"I was captivated (with the show) from the start," Johnston stated. "Poehler and Offerman are two very funny people and the competition takes place in this huge barn that is stocked with cool craft stuff, so that alone was enough to love."

Johnston admits that right off the bat she was curious as to how these people got on the show in the first place. She's been a crafter since she was little and she thought it looked like a fun challenge. So one day

egeagle@goldfieldaccess.net With COVID questions filling the minds of many in Wright County, one of the things they are wondering about is whether or not the Eagle Grove Family Aquatic Center will be opening or not. And if not, how will they stay cool and still stay socially distanced this summer while still finding some fun-inthe-sun?

According to Eagle Grove City Administrator Bryce Davis, the fate of the pool for this summer is unfortunately still uncertain due to the rising numbers of COVID-19 cases in Wright County.

"We are currently monitoring the situation regarding the number of active positive cases and community spread potential in and around Wright County," he said.

They also have a current list of best mitigation practices and guidelines from the CDC and Department of Public Health.

"We believe our next decision regarding the Eagle Grove Aquatic Center will be made on June 15, 2020," he went on to say. "Based on the situation and increased mitigation practices that our high school lifeguards would be required to implement and maintain makes this a very difficult decision. I,

The fate of the Eagle Grove Family Aquatic Center opening for the 2020 season will be decided on June 15.

personally, do not see the Eagle Grove Aquatic Center opening this summer, but that decision will remain open until the situation in Wright County stabilizes to ensure the safety and wellness of patrons and staff." With that in mind, many people in the Eagle Grove community have been purchasing backyard, above-ground swimming pools in an effort to beat-theheat at home. Davis reminds the public that there are city guidelines that must be followed should you decide to purchase one for your family.

The City Code regarding swimming pools states the following:

"All swimming pools located within the zoning jurisdiction of the City shall be surrounded by a fence or wall at least four feet in height. The fence or wall shall be designed to prevent entry into the pool by small children and by dogs and cats."

COVID numbers rising in Wright County | Weathering the storm... - result of more testing

BY KIM DEMORY EDITOR egeagle@goldfieldaccess.net As first seen on our website theeaglegroveeagle.com

Editors Note: Numbers have been updated since we first posted this last Thursday, June 4, 2020.

Last week, Wright County was listed as one of the top three COVID-19 "hot spots" in Iowa. Wright County Supervisor and Public Information Officer Karl Helgevold said that while this statement is true, the numbers are "skewed." If you would compare the number of tests given per capita, county numbers across the state would look a lot different.

"(Wright County is) doing the same thing we've been doing...Increasing the testing increases the number of positives found," he said.

Helgevold clarified saying that Wright County is taking a proactive approach to testing and identifying people who have come in contact with a COVID-19 person. They have offered pop-up site testing as well as continue to do spot checking in the nursing homes as well as production facilities.

"Per capita we are one of the more aggressive testing counties. We're even testing households if there's a positive in the house, we will many times test the rest of the household. We don't always wait for symptoms. We try to shorten that cap from a potential exposure to testing. However, if someone is exposed they need to continue to isolate to assure that symptoms do not occur and avoid spreading the virus. Some of the testing in the pop-up clinics were potential exposures in a large crowd, so we erred on caution and offered testing to all those who weren't sure if they were within six feet for more than 15 minutes," said Wright County Public Health Nurse/epidemiology/RN Sandy McGrath.

"For every positive person we can identify with a test, that's one less person walking around spreading the virus," added Helgevold, addressing the fact that many of the positive results are in patients who are asymptomatic and don't even realize they have the virus and could potentially spread it to other people. Last week alone, Wright County Public Health administered roughly 600 tests. In total, they have tested close to 3,000 people. This number includes people who work in Wright County but do not live here, traveling here for work instead.

Iowa Specialty Hospital has tested an additional 2,000 people for COVID-19. This number does not include those individuals who have been tested at Unity Point Clinics.

"So the numbers released are correct. We are a hot spot, but it's because we're testing,' explained Helgevold. "We're doing a lot of extra testing that other counties are not doing. It's our obligation to test and our obligation to let people

McGrath clarified that the people they are testing are not already symptomatic. They are trying to prevent the spread of the virus.

'It's like walking through a dark room and you turn on the lights - you just see what's already there," said McGrath. "Don't panic, but be aware," said Helgevold.

"You can't compare us to other counties. Our population is smaller and we're doing more McGrath said she can not stress enough - IF YOU FEEL SICK, STAY HOME - TALK TO YOUR HEALTHCARE PROVIDER - GET TESTED. "GROUP GATHERINGS ARE JUST NOT A GOOD IDEA right now," she added.

In addition, remember the basic safety guidelines - wear a mask and continue to social distance - if not for your own safety, for those around you who are susceptible. All it takes is one unknown positive to create more positives.

McGrath said that she believes they are starting to slow the spread of COVID-19 in Wright County with all this testing, but that's all we can do until there is a vaccine.

According to the coronavirus.iowa.gov website as of Monday, June 8, there have been 244 positive cases reported in Wright County with a total of 60 recovered and 0 deaths.

McGrath noted that there are still 150 test results pending at this time as well. As the days and weeks go on, they will continue to do trace testing if individuals who come back positive have been in contact with others.

"If you have been around them closer than six feet for 15 minutes, then you have been exposed (and need to be tested)," said McGrath.

In addition, Mickey Cooper, Board of Health president, added, "Remember the basic safety guidelines."

You are encouraged to not only social distance, but stay home when you can. The less contact you have with other people the less likely you are to contract the virus. If you must go out, wear a mask and wash/sanitize your hands. Do not touch your face.

our town on Saturday, May 30,

This story of compassion and the kindness of strangers begins back on Tuesday, May 26, when the tornado sirens went off in Eagle Grove shortly after 3:30 p.m. As many people took shelter, others in the country on the south side of Eagle Grove pulled out their phones and captured proof that a tornado was in fact located on the northwest side of Woolstock and headed straight for Eagle Grove. The National Weather Service later classified it as an EF-1 tornado with winds reaching as high as 110 miles per hour. While most homes and businesses escaped with no damage at all, there were a few branches and small limbs down on the east side of the City of Eagle Grove. It didn't look bad at all...at least from the streets.

But the backyard of Trish Backer, a recent widow who had just purchased a home on the southeast side of Eagle Grove a few weeks ago told a much different story. Backer wasn't there when the storm passed through, and found out about the destruction when she received a phone call from the people who had helped her move some stuff... people she said she didn't even know three months ago.

"It was just devastating. I didn't know which way to turn at the time," she said about the damage and the fact that she really knew no one in town. "Then all of these people that I didn't know came to help me. It's just surreal and I appreciate it so people came thanks to her neighbor, Beth Wilson, mentioned at their Grace E Free board meeting on that next Thursday evening. Gorkom, van executive the director GoServ Global, also happened to be at the meeting that night.

'We on the phones and got some people willing to come," said van Gorkom.

One of the people they called was Dennis Anderson, director of domestic disaster relief for GoServ who came with others from an hourand-a-half away to help.

On Saturday, May 30, the GoServ Global team from near and far came to help a complete stranger. Members of the Grace E Free Church, as well as other Eagle Grove community members, also showed up in Backers backyard to lend a helping hand and show her what community and kindness is really all about. They showed up with chain saws and skid loaders and a determination to put things back to normal for this new resident of Eagle Grove. They pulled out poles stuck in the ground, removed large tree limbs, scooped up branches and debris... and placed them in one of two dump trucks, one brought in by Wilson's brother-in-law, Duane.

"That was phenomenal that

Dennis Anderson, director of domestic disaster relief for GoServ Global, uses the skid loader to remove large debris.

There were two-and-a-half loads of debris removed from the backyard.

Duane brought over his dump trailer as well, that way we didn't have to wait to keep working while they went to go dump the GoServ truck," said van Gorkom.

It took 16 volunteers three hours to accomplish a job that will be appreciated for a lifetime by Backer.

was unbelievably That wonderful what they did. I am so happy for her," said Barb Jones, who Backer bought the house from. "She just bought the house on May 8 and to have this happen just a little over 2 weeks later, I can't imagine."

"This is a great example of a community helping each other out," added van Gorkom. I want to thank the volunteers that joined forces with GoServ Global to accomplish this job...I love it when we can help people in our own community.'

"Everybody did such an awesome job," she said. "Thank you! Thank you!"

WRIGHT COUNTY: COVID-19 HAS ARRIVED

COVID-19 has hit Wright County in full force, including several cases requiring hospitalization. Now is NOT the time to relax on precautions that can decrease the spread of COVID-19. Do the right thing for yourself, loved ones, neighbors, and community. Mask up, social distance, avoid public areas whenever possible, stay home if you're sick, and wash your hands. Together we can win the COVID-19 battle.

Just under 36 percent of voters cast ballots in primary

BY LES HOUSER SPORTS EDITOR

wrightcosports@gmail.com 1,385 Republicans (67 percent) and 682 Democrats

(32.9 percent) voted in last Tuesday's primary election. For United States senator, the race was among democratic candidates with Theresa Greenfield carrying Wright County with 363 votes and nearly 54 percent of registered Democrats. She also won statewide, and will now face incumbent Republican Joni Ernst this fall. Ernst garnered nearly 98.2 percent with no opposition. Other democratic totals were Michael Franken with 161 votes for 23.9 percent, Kimberly Graham with 71 for 10.6 percent and Eddie Mauro with 67 for 10 percent.

For U.S. Representative District 4, incumbent Steve King carried the county but lost the statewide vote to put an end to his run in that office. King got 525 votes for 39.4 percent, with Randy Feenstra at 457 for 34.3 percent and Bret Richards at 212 for 15.9 percent. Feenstra carried the state vote, and will now square off with Republican J.D. Scholten to decide a new congressman for Iowa. He received 634 votes as the only candidate.

Guth was unopposed as a incumbent State Senator for District 4, and garnered 1,216 votes for 98.9 percent. Terry Baxter won the Republican vote in State Representative District 8 with 1,230 votes for 99 percent. He will face Glenn Kiss, the Democratic winner, in the fall. Kiss got 518 votes for 99.6

At the county level, it appears two incumbent supervisors beat challengers to be the only names on the fall ballot. In District 1, Rick Rasmussen grabbed 788 votes for 58.1 percent. He defeated challenger Jason Wessels, who had 564 votes for 41.6 percent. Karl Helgevold carried District 3 on the Republican side, getting 853 votes for 64 percent. He bested challenger Mike Boyd with 476 votes for 36 percent. Both will face no opposition in the General Election.

Two other county offices were on the ballot, with both Republicans winning with no opposition from within or outside of their party. Betty Ellis looks to be reelected in the fall after getting 1,276 votes for 98.9 pecent. Jason Schluttenhofer will be going for another term as sheriff after picking up 1,313 votes for 99.5

November 3 will be the General Election, when voters will also be deciding on a President of the United States.

Election goes smoothly with record turnout despite virus concerns

BY BRIDGET SHILENY WRIGHT COUNTY MONITOR, EDITOR wrightcomonitor@gmail.com

The last few months have been out of the ordinary for Wright County Auditor Betty Ellis. She is used to preparing for elections, but the primary this year looked very different from past ones. She found herself having to think about face masks, plexiglass barriers and hand sanitizer as she tackled planning an election in the midst of concerns about COVID-19. Most significant of all, the usual system of several voting precincts across the county was changed to centralized location and absentee ballots were pushed. And apparently, the adjustments worked out just

Several weeks ago, Ellis and her fellow Iowa county auditors started to encourage voters to apply for absentee ballots. Then Iowa Secretary of State Paul Pate decided to allow the mailing of absentee ballot request forms to every registered voter and extend the early voting period for mailed ballots from 29 days to 40 days. This was a measure to prevent groups from having to gather at polling places and risk exposure to coronavirus.

This initiative more successful than Ellis could have imagined. Over 1,900 absentee ballots were requested throughout Wright County. By the end of last week, Ellis had received back 1,718 ballots that were countable. This is impressive as in the last primary in 2016 she explained only 44 absentee ballots were returned.

The in-person voting was understandably less popular. 369 Wright County voters came out to vote at the county's one official polling place, the Red Shed Event Center in Clarion. The county usually has 10 precincts but with health and safety concerns, they decided to have all voters come to one location for inperson voting, something that many counties throughout the country did as well.

Ellis noted that having the one polling place allowed them to control the situation very well. There was a hand sanitizing station right when voters came in the door, poll workers were behind plexiglass barriers, pens were not shared, and areas were cleaned after each voter. Ellis added that the Red Shed, which is a large event venue, allowed plenty of social distancing space. She admits that she was initially concerned about voters having to travel if they wanted to vote in person, but it didn't seem to be too much of a problem.

In the end, all of the efforts from Ellis and her staff and helpers paid off. She noted that voter turnout was above and beyond what it was four years ago at over 37% for the county with 2,067 ballots cast. In 2016, the number was 568. Statewide, Iowa broke their previous 1994 record and saw 24% turnout.

Overall, Ellis said she was very pleased with how everything went throughout the county. She was happy with her staff and poll workers and even said voters did a great job filling in ovals on ballots this year, which makes her job easier.

She added that she is not sure what to expect for the general election in November. Decisions have not been made regarding polling sites and absentee ballots yet. But whatever does happen, Ellis is confident that Wright County will meet all challenges to get out the vote.

Supervisors continue drainage repairs discussion from last week BY BRIDGET SHILENY

WRIGHT COUNTY MONITOR, EDITOR wrightcomonitor@gmail.com At the Wright County

Board of Supervisors Monday meeting, the public hearing from last week regarding drainage district #107 was continued. This week, Dan Wiedmeier of McClure Engineering showed the breakdown of costs that landowners would be responsible for depending if they own land in Wright or Hancock County. Hancock landowners are only responsible for some costs including excavation, spoil leveling and band seeding as they don't benefit from some of the other repairs. The final breakdown with that considered is that Wright Co. landowners will pay 80% and Hancock 20%. Bid letting for the project will take place in the near future.

The board reviewed the contract with Cost Advisory Services, Inc. to develop an annual central service cost allocation plan for the next three fiscal years. This company works with the county to review records in order to get reimbursed for state and federal programs. The county pays them $4,125 per year and have in the past been reimbursed close to $20,000. The board elected to stay with that company at the

They also reviewed fuel bids for the next fiscal year. They went with the low bidder, AgVantage FS, who bid 7.5 cents over the rack price. The rack price includes the cost of the gas itself, as well as transportation, overhead, and profit costs. Assistant County Engineer Jeremy Abbas noted that this price is pretty consistent with last year.

In other business:

-The canvass of votes for last Tuesday's primary was moved from the supervisors meeting to the next morning.

-Drainage attorney David Johnson appeared to discuss two topics. The board went into closed session for both, per Iowa code, to discuss strategy with counsel in matters that are presently in litigation or where litigation in imminent.

-Sandy McGrath gave the weekly update from the Emergency Operations Center on COVID-19 in Wright County. She said they completed major industry testing in the county on Friday and noted there are still positive cases out in the community. She expects that numbers could still go up.

-The board also took some time to recognize Larry Olson, who died last week. Olson was a Wright County Supervisor for

School Board sets Commencement for June 20

If weather postpones, it will be 21st with no reschedule date

BY LES HOUSER SPORTS EDITOR wrightcosports@gmail.com

The Eagle Grove Board of Education spent some time discussing the holding of the Graduation ceremony. According to Superintendent Jess Toliver, the directors needed to make a decision on this now. "I've had several conversations with Sandra McGrath at Public Health," stated the head administrator. "With the rising numbers the question is could we do an outdoor graduation, keeping in mind distancing. Parents only would be allowed. I would only need two board members on the stage. What guidance do you want to give me?"

Toliver went on to say that Public Health won't recommend it, but wouldn't necessarily stand in the way either. "I would like to have a ceremony, but don't want to go against their wishes," he said. The Board spent several minutes in discussion and weighing their desire against the safety of everyone involved. Robinson Director Darren then made the motion to hold Commencement on Saturday, June 20 starting at 2 p.m., with Sunday, June 21 being a rain date. It was also added that if either doesn't work there would be no rescheduling. The motion was seconded and approved. Toliver also wanted a decision on Prom. "I don't see having it," he said. "It would be irresponsible to try to have it," said Robinson. He made a motion to cancel Prom for this year, which was also seconded and approved.

The Board also heard of plans for next school year, at least if it happens. "We held a meeting with the EGEA and the EGESA Leadership Team and administrators to discuss our return to traditional classes and what we could do to prepare our staff and benefit our students," said Toliver. "We also want to start earlier to increase our educational time. We are very blessed to have association leadership who are studentcentered, so they were very supportive."

Toliver went on to say that, basically, they will trade four contract days at the end of this year for adding four earlier days to the next school calendar. "It will allow one additional week to work with students, or to prepare for online education if schools are not allowed to open at that time. The question is very fluid, so it could change again."

Under the plan, there will be four days of voluntary Professional Development (PD) August 11-14 with the final day allowing teachers to prepare their classrooms for students arrival. If they miss those days, they will have to make up the

PD training online on their own time. Classes will start on August 17, with the first three days as half-days with PD time to follow. "The 17th and 18th will replace the two flex-days that are on our teacher calendar," said Toliver. "Non-certified staff will be paid for additional days worked. If the Governor doesn't allow schools to open yet, we will use these as PD days to prepare for online education. However, right now we are planning on having school as normal next fall." Toliver added that the 'return to learn' plan required by the state would remain on the agenda every month until then, due to changes that may have to occur. The Board reviewed and approved a proposal for design services for the Emerson Building. This would allow for classrooms to be utilized on the second level. "We are out of room at the high school," said Toliver. "We can put some classrooms upstairs starting with the 21-22 school year. We will use the $1 million we received in TIF money to do this." Down the road, he stated he eventually sees the lower level also being used as the building is then connected to the high school. The Board approved accepting a proposal for phase 1 of $70,000 from SVPA Architects of West Des

Depending on the Lord

Because of the growth of Genesis Church in Peru, we began seriously looking at a property just down the road from our current building. We made a deal by February and the renovations began immediately. My job was the installation of all things production. Early mornings, late nights ... never enough time to get everything done ... realizing you forgot to each lunch again! It was a long and tiring process, but a process worth every second to see it all come together.

It has humbled me though. Going from high-tech production while working at a church in the States and then coming to Genesis Church in Peru was a hard adjustment for me. It often frustrated me and I knew we could do so much better if only we had new equipment. Over and over again though it taught me grace. It taught me that the church is not and has never been about the performance. God doesn't want perfection or a performance. More than the lights and the cameras and the sound, He wants His children to come to Him. And if we give our best effort, to the best of our knowledge, He'll take care of the rest.

So, when the reality hit of new equipment, it made me ecstatic!! I thought that this was finally going to be the day that being in production doesn't frustrate me and things will for once be "easy."

The night before our dedication service (and our first 'service" in the new place) in February, I had double and triple checked all my sound, cables and production to be sure it was all in its place and working well. Having it all ready, I locked up for the night. I was finally looking forward to sound being "easy" and me actually enjoying

Upon showing up the next morning, less than 11 hours later, I had no sound. It wasn't working. Fastpaced trouble-shooting and frantic phone calls to my own personal sound family, nothing seemed to fix the problem. I had to move the whole system to practically under the stage, and that was where I ran sound from.

Ending the dedication service, as everyone was exclaiming how much they enjoyed the worship and prayer and the moving of the Holy Spirit during the dedication, I had nothing but frustration and annoyance. Frustration that I still didn't know where the problem was or have the solution and annoyance that everything worked last night and now I had nothing working with a brand-new system.

Making sure to tell God exactly how I felt, I'm pretty sure I used the words, "This is not how it was supposed to go, God! It was supposed to be easy!!" As if it was me who now made the "game plan" of how things should be.

The Lord's response to me? It went something like this ... "If things were easy though, you wouldn't need Me. I want you to be dependent on Me." And it's true. The low quality and frustration and uncertainty I had with the previous production system (as much as I hated it) kept me dependent on nothing else but God's goodness to hold it together for each service. In the new building, with new equipment, I wasn't dependent on Him. In every test I ran, I was dependent on my own knowledge. I didn't need Him.

Yet again, as a the Good Father that He is, He humbled me and reminded me that He doesn't care about our production or our performance. He wants us to depend fully on Him, in the easy and in the difficult.

Jonathan Erdman, Weather Channel Senior Digital Meteorologist, says the exact location and intensity of summer thunderstorms is somewhat unpredictable. That means, when conditions are right, a severe storm can pop up quickly and intensify in a matter of minutes.

"Anytime thunderstorms are possible in your location, you need to keep an eye to the sky and look for weather updates on your phone's weather app," Erdman says. Processors trying to manage through a difficult situation

wrightcosports@gmail.com

The news has been full of stories about how livestock producers are trying their best to cope with the problem of getting animals to the processors, some of which have shut down due to employees testing positive for COVID-19. Unfortunately, it could even lead to the sad point of euthanizing their investment. The plants are doing the best they can to handle the situation, but it continues to be frustrating as the backlog of animals ready for slaughter only gets worse.

According to 2017 information supplied by the Coalition to Support Iowa's Farmers, Wright County has 39 percent of its population employed in agriculture and ag-related businesses. In addition, 20 percent of those jobs are in raising of livestock compared to 10 percent in crop production only. Over $1.93 million in total agriculture sales was generated in the county from 735 farms. The average farm size of 485 acres shows that there's still a place for the smaller operations. The market value of all livestock sold was over $294 million, and of that 818,860 hogs were sold and 2,947 cattle sold for slaughter.

According to a press release from the Iowa Pork Producers Association, this state raises one-third of the nation's pigs. It doesn't happen overnight, and it takes approximately 10 months from conception for a pig to be ready for market. The virus has disrupted the food supply chain, and has led to difficult decisions on the farms. An average workday in Iowa would normally see 150,000 pigs delivered to the state's processing plants. That is simply not the case right now. Processing is down by nearly 40 percent, so farmers cannot get pigs processed and pork products cannot get to stores and ultimately to your table. Pork producers take great pride in putting a nutritious and affordable protein on your table, so this really impacts their life's work and livelihood.

Both Jere Null, CEO of Prestage Foods of Iowa, and Ryan Pudenz, General Manager of Prestage Farms of Iowa, also contributed updates of their operations during the pandemic.

"In terms of increased capacity at plants across the country, there has been steady progress in the last few weeks," said Null concerning the current state of the processing industry. "We are currently operating at over 90 percent of our daily capacity.'

When asked about the difficulty of getting pigs to market, to the point of even producers being forced to destroy animals, Pudenz bluntly stated, "The impacts are real, and they are real for producers all across the country. There are current backlog estimates of over 600,000 market pigs in Iowa that may have to be euthanized in the coming

Null went on to say that Prestage recognizes that their team plays important roles in producing food that this country needs. "With the health and safety of our team members at the top of our mind during this time of COVID-19, we have put in place numerous additional safety measures at our plant to help maintain a healthy work environment so we can continue operations along with our supply chain partners," he said. "We are carefully monitoring all aspects of our operations so that we can minimize impacts of this virus. We are doing all we can to help our industry sustain the nation's food supply. We appreciate and salute our team members for all they are doing, day in and day out."

Pudenz believes there is already a bit of light at the end of this dark tunnel of uncertainty. "All plants in Iowa are operating at this time, though most are at a reduced capacity," he said. "That's something we are grateful for, but we still have a huge backlog of pigs that we have to work through. That is definitely a challenge." He also admits that not knowing future plant operating capacities is the biggest issue going forward post-pandemic. "If plants are only able to run at 80-90 percent of capacity, producers will be in the position of evaluating the size of their herds."

Pudenz also has a message for producers at this difficult time. "I would recommend them to reach out and utilize resources available to them through the National Pork Board, Iowa Pork Producers and the Iowa Resources Coordination Center," he said.

"They would be more than happy to help."

Null leaves a message for consumers. "The inventory of pork at some grocery stores might be temporarily limited, but that should not be a long-term issue," he said. "As operating capacity normalizes, any selection or availability issues should be resolved."

A recent press release, provided by Communications Director Jen Sorenson with Iowa Select Farms, states in part, "Every U.S. pork producer has been forced to make difficult decisions on how to manage the backlog's impact on their operation. The thought of euthanizing entire herds is devastating, since a farmer is dedicated to feeding families around the world. Sadly, Iowa Select has been forced to make this heartbreaking decision for some of its herd. Veterinarians and production well-being professionals are overseeing the process to ensure accordance with the American Association of Swine Veterinarians and the American Veterinary Medical Association. This is sad and difficult work. Our team members grieve as they implement our plan, and yet, given the devastating effects of COVID-19 on those who work in food supply, there are few options."

The beef industry has also been affected, but according to Ashley Recknor of Blue Ribbon Beef just not to the same extent as with pork. "There is a longer window for marketing the beef than the pork producers have, and our production is not so closely timed," stated Recknor. She went on to say that they are moving product through their store (Purple Ribbon General Store), online sales (www. purpleribbonbeef.com) and from their Facebook page. "In addition, we've restarted the farmers markets in Ames and Clear Lake," she said. "They have online ordering available for pick up there and those have been going well."

She feels that the backlog should be a relatively short-term trend as processing facilities open back up. "They're implementing additional numerous safety precautions and cleaning procedures," added Recknor. "Additionally, as consumers are buying more regular quantities at any one time this helps the supply chain too." Unfortunately, she admits this has all had a drastic change for the worse on market prices. "The cattle market is in rebound now," she said. Recknor admits that there's always a chance that some producers might not survive when it's over. "When there is great fluctuation in the markets, and the loss of the corn by-products markets, we will ultimately lose some producers," she said. "It's the uncertainty of the future of the future that makes it difficult."

She asks for everyone to be patient during this time. "It takes all parts of the supply chain to get beef or pork to the consumers table," said Recknor. "From the farm to the processor or locker, then to the store or retailer. It also takes time to have a quality product. We will get back to having the best and safest consistent supply." She also wishes to thank everyone who has supported both the beef and pork industries during this time, and continuing to do so. "Whether you are buying locally and direct, or through your favorite grocery store, we truly appreciate it," said Recknor. "If you ever have questions please reach out as we are happy to answer any questions. We also encourage people, if you can't find your favorites at the meat counter, to try new and different cuts of meat during this time. For ideas on substitutions, ask us or someone at the meat counter. We're all happy to help!"

The Fareway Corporate office in Boone also provided a statement for this story. This is from the Market Operations team, and sent to us by Fareway's Outreach and Communications Manager Emily Toribio. It reads: "Fareway is in constant communication with our great suppliers and we have been preparing for this potential issue. At this time, our supply is steady and we are not seeing dramatic shortages. However, we continue to reserve the right to limit quantities. One of the quickest ways to adversely affect available supply is for people to over-purchase. We are mindful of the fact that people are attempting to shop once per week. Therefore, we ask customers to use responsible judgment, be considerate of others, and not over-purchase. If this occurs, we remain optimistic that our supply will continue to meet

WE REMEMBER OUR LOVED ONES

Sheryl Ahrens, 69, Eagle Grove

Sheryl Ahrens, 69, of Eagle Grove, formerly of Watseka, IL, passed away peacefully, with her family by her side, on Monday, June 1, 2020, at Rotary Senior Living in Eagle Grove, following a battle with cancer. A graveside service will be held at 11:00 a.m. on Thursday, June 4, 2020 at Oak Hill Cemetery, Watseka.

Sheryl Ann (Dukes) Ahrens, the daughter of Sherril and Bertha (Wilt) Dukes, was born on October 10, 1950, in Watseka, Illinois. She was raised and educated in the area of her birth and received cosmetology degree after attending Kanka Kee Community College. Sheryl worked in the school cafeteria and for many local restaurants.

was united in marriage with Harold Ahrens in Watseka. After Harold's sudden death in 1997, she moved to Eagle Grove, Iowa in 1999.

Sheryl Ahrens

Sheryl continued to care for people's food needs and served many breakfasts at Ampride in Eagle Grove and cared for

On June 27, 1971, Sheryl others while she worked for Krysilis in Belmond.

Sheryl was a member of the Centennial Christian Church in Watseka. She loved gardening, flowers, feeding birds (and other wild animals) and her dogs!!

Sheryl is survived by her sons, Robert Ahrens and Shawn Ahrens and his wife Jenna and two granddaughters, Emily and Sarah all of Eagle Grove. She was preceded in death by her parents, husband, Harold, son, Ryan Ahrens and sister, Freida Schaumburg.

Memorials may be left to the discretion of the family.

Arrangements by Foust Funeral Home, Eagle Grove, Iowa and Baier Funeral Home, Watseka, Illinois.

Stella Burras, 91, Renwick

Stella Ethel (Shirley) Burras died at the Iowa Veterans Home on June 06, 2020. Stella was born March 10, 1929 to Paul Wilbur and Eloisa Isabell (Owens) Shirley on her Grandmother Shirley's farm near Queen City, Missouri. Stella was the 6th child and 5th daughter in a family that saw 11 children grow to adulthood. In 1935, the family moved 40 miles north to a farm near Blakesburg, Iowa. Stella attended Wapello County rural elementary schools. She graduated from Blakesburg High School in 1947, where one of her favorite memories was playing guard on their 6-player girls' basketball team.

Stella attended Iowan Wesleyan College in Mount Pleasant for one year before becoming a rural schoolteacher near Blakesburg. In 1949 she moved to rural Wright County (near Olaf and Kanawha) in order to be the teacher in a rural Norway Township (section 17, T93N, R25W) school. She lived across from the school with Richard and Jennie Veldhouse where she met their Stella and Irving were married on June 27, 1951, in Winterset, Stella spent her married life as a farmwife and mother. Stella and Irving's first farm was near her parents outside of Ottumwa, where their eldest son, Bernie, was born. In 1954 they returned to Wright County, settling on Renwick as their long-term home in 1963. All seven of their children were confirmed at the St. Paul Lutheran Church and graduated from Boone Valley High School. Stella's children are Irving ("Bernie," 1951);

("Ray," 1957), Lee (1959) and Bruce (1967). Stella routinely mentioned she only planned to have three children.

Stella Burras

Stella returned to teaching in 1964 when she became the 6th grade teacher at Titonka Elementary School. Over the next decade she taught 6th grade at West Bend, Wesley and Goldfield. Tiring of the beatup farmhouse, Stella bought a large house in Renwick in 1969. In 1971 – as a 42-yearold mother of 7, schoolteacher, farmwife and commuting student - Stella graduated from Drake University with her bachelor's degree in 1974, Stella switched from teaching to welding at Trigg's Manufacturing in Belmond. She worked there for 2 years, before becoming a welder and then the welding supply manager at Hagie Manufacturing in Clarion where she remained for five years. Irving died in 1983.

In 2014 Stella moved to the Iowa Veteran's Home, a place she very much enjoyed and where she was wonderfully treated. She lived there because of Irving's naval service aboard the USS Swasey (DE 248) during World War II.

Stella was preceded in

James (1954); Gail (1954), death by her parents Paul and Rex (1956), Raymond Burdett Isabell Shirley (1974, 2001, respectively), her husband Irving (1983), son Ray (2005), daughters-in-law (2017) and Alicia (2012), infant grandson Samuel (1997), and siblings Lawrence, Keith, John, Laura, Jean, Esther, and Ruth. Survivors are three siblings -Robert (Shirley) of Billings, Montana, Charles of Walnut, Iowa, and Joyce (Marvin) Brooks of Knoxville, Iowa, six children - Bernie of Renwick, James of Middleburg, Florida, Gail of Pontiac, Illinois, Rex (Chris) of Mauldin, South Carolina, Lee (Lori) of Ames, Iowa, and Bruce (Maryca) of West Lafayette, Indiana, 10 grandchildren and 11 great grandchildren.

Overall, Stella's life was a wonderful testament to being a good human, Christian, citizen, wife, mother and grandmother. To the very end she was especially proud of her grandchildren, her flower and vegetable gardens, her rural upbringing, her Grandfather Benjamin Stone's combat service in the US Civil War's neighbor, Irving B. Burras. Elementary Education. In 17th and 114th Ohio Volunteer Regiments, her membership in the Daughters of the American Revolution..... and maybe – just maybe - her kids in general. Stella will be buried alongside Irving in Norway Cemetery, Wright County, following a service at St. Paul Lutheran's Church in > Renwick. Funeral services for Stella was held on Wednesday, June 10, 2020, at St. Paul Lutheran Church in Renwick. Interment will be in Norway Township Cemetery in Kanawha.

State reaches testing goal as COVID-19 steadily spreads

BY TRAVIS FISCHER

MidAmerica Publishing

Protests across the state directed attention away from the COVID-19 pandemic last week, however the lack of daily headlines has not slowed the spread of the disease.

While no changes to statewide emergency proclamation were announced last week, the state government is still implementing measures to monitor the novel coronavirus.

Testing capabilities continue to ramp up across the state. Governor Kim Reynolds reported last week that on Saturday, May 30, the state finally crossed the 5,000 tests in one day threshold and has kept that pace, averaging 5,017 tests per day for a week.

When the outbreak began in March, the state was only able to test 10,714 people through the month. In April, testing capacity ramped up with 53,886 tests as the state deployed strike teams to target heavily impacted areas. This continued in May as TestIowa got off the ground, dramatically increasing the state's capability with 124,949 tests performed through the month. In total, 187,932 individuals have been tested across the state since the start of the pandemic.

'While we're prioritizing sites in communities where virus activity has increased or where access to testing is limited, when the needs of the community are met we're able to quickly relocate the site to another area," said Reynolds. "We're also looking for opportunities to provide TestIowa in more communities through partnerships with local healthcare providers. I fully expect that we will continue to expand its footprint across the state in the weeks and months to

As of Sunday, June 7, there have been 21,635 confirmed cases of COVID-19 in the state, increasing the 19,552 total from the week prior. The 2,083 new cases reported since the previous Sunday indicate that the spread has not increased or decreased since the previous week.

Approximately 8,200 of the confirmed cases are currently fighting the disease, with 269 of them hospitalized and 86 people in an ICU.

In total, approximately, 1,082 elderly (age 80+), 2,813 older adults (61-80), 7,572 middle aged adults (41-60), 9,303 young adults (18-40), and 865 children (0-17) have tested positive for the disease. Current testing shows that roughly 64% of the positive cases result in symptoms while 11% of those testing positive have been asymptomatic.

22,254 Iowans have also undergone serology testing for coronavirus antibodies, indicating that they have had the virus. Of that number 1,952, about 9%, have tested positive for antibodies.

The death rate continues to dip, with 70 additional deaths reported last week, bringing the total to 604. Of the fatal cases, approximately 284 have been elderly, 248 have been older adults, 60 have been middle aged, and 12 have been young adults.

Half of the deaths attributed to COVID-19 in Iowa have come from outbreaks in long term care facilities. An additional outbreak was reported last week, bringing the total to 40 current outbreaks and 1,556 current positive cases. Governor Reynolds announced last week that the state is looking at the CDC's guidance and have developed their own guidance for reopening long term care facilities. This guidance will help facilities safely establish policies for visitation, outside trips, dining practices, and group activities for long term care residents when they are reopened.

"We're also going to continue to reinforce really good and important strategies like screening for symptoms. using appropriate PPE, and cowarding or grouping patients together when needed," said State Medical Director Dr. Caitlin Pedati.

Testing will continue to be prioritized to staff and residents as well, both case-by-case and facility wide.

Planning for the future outbreak events, the state is working with the County Emergency Management Association to build six regional PPE stockpiles with a 30 day supply of PPE for each county in "The pandemic is not over and there remains much work to do," said Reynolds.

Minutes of the previous regular meeting of May 18, 2020 were read and approved. Approved claims for payment

Heard an update on the COVID-19 surveillance testing. The county will continue to do the surveillance testing of the larger employers. Of the positive tests coming in this past weekend, they were all asymptomatic. Wright County has 123 positive cases of COVID-19 throughout the time of the pandemic.

Held a conference call with Brian at Reilly Construction, Eric and Kelly with ISG Engineering. Brian gave update on progress from last week. They did get the tiles connected by the well house and said that it worked really well. Kelly gave an explanation on the pads for change order #3. Kluss does not feel that the county should be responsible for paying for the 3 days on the wait due to the ground not prepped and they did not no-tify the county of the issue. Also, paving on the East half of road is not done yet due to the continual rain.

Cindy Litwiller, Wright County Economic Development Director, requested approval of the Promissory Note between Wright County Economic Development and Clarion Economic Development Corporation as a small business loan to provide immediate and necessary assistance to small businesses who may be adversely affected by COVID-19 pandemic. This note will be 25,000 for a period of 15 years at zero percent interest. Motion by Rasmussen and seconded by Helgevold to approve the promissory note with the Clarion Economic Development Corporation. Motion carries. Motion by Rasmussen and seconded by Helgevold to appoint Donna Brown to the Wright County Conservation Board for another 5 year term ending June 30,

THE ALTERNATIVE

Learning from experts

I was kinda disappointed when I went away to college that I missed out on the Peoples' Park riots. College was a small art school in Oakland adjoining Berkeley. Peoples' Park was a vacant lot full of trash owned by the university and acquired through eminent domain (they stole it). Locals cleaned it up, removing derelict cars and demolition debris, planting flowers, trees and shrubs, and installing playground equipment. They claimed it as their own.

The university thought otherwise. After the lot was improved, the university wanted to make a parking lot out of it. They erected a fence and eventually "the people" moved to take back the park. Law enforcement used tear gas, pepper gas, and buckshot to "control" the crowds. Why in the world I was disappointed to miss out, I have no

I did participate in other demonstrations. I was among 400,000 people who marched up Market Street in San Francisco. When we arrived, the sidewalks were overflowing and an elderly lady was crowded off into the street. An Alameda County deputy sprang into action beating the woman with a nightstick and screaming, "Get back on the sidewalk." Nobody had a cell phone camera so we grabbed her and got her to safety. Soon the police were over-whelmed; the entire street was filled storefront to storefront for miles.

I never encountered the violence like at Peoples' Park and I never witnessed a protester calling a serviceman, "baby killer." In fact a huge number of protesters were Vietnam Vets. They had seen it, unlike most of the hawks of today.

While living in Oakland I witnessed a huge societal change. Oakland was a working class town. It was predominately white before I lived there. There were good industrial jobs to be had and that attracted an influx of black folks looking for stable work and a place to raise a family. Being from Southern California, I found it uplifting to see well-maintained neighborhoods housing workers for the local factories.

I lived two blocks from the high school where the founder of the Black Panther Party attended. While the families found things to be better in Oakland that showed there was always room for im-provement. The Panthers con-ducted free breakfasts and pre and after school programs. People appreciated their help.

But along with that help came indoctrination. The room for improvement came with roadblocks. Quite truthfully, one of those roadblocks was skin color. The Panthers claimed overcoming those roadblocks could only be achieved through Soviet style revolution. The children were being stolen from their par-

The U.S. government has taken on the same role that the Panthers assumed. Bullying and destroying, and toppling rulers around the world has become accepted as our role in a beneficent righteous crusade.

What we see in cities where criminals peaceful overwhelm protesters shows that they have learned well from their own government. The cops that murdered George Floyd, the looters, and the vandals are a microcosm of their own government. The enabling element in all these tragedies is the adoption of identity politics as a legiti-mate way of thinking.

In order to discuss any news, it has to be simplified to conserve time. What is lost in doing so is the truth that we are all individuals.

I'm waiting to see who gets fired for keeping Derek Chauvin on the Minneapolis Police Department after multiple complaints. I'm waiting to see the vandals and looters arrested and jailed. I'm waiting to see governors order protesters and rioters to be kept six feet apart. I'm waiting to see the U.S. government resume "peace, commerce, and honest friendship with all nations – entangling alliances with none," as George Washington wrote in his Farewell Address.

TIP OF THE WEEK:

Get moving! Walking is a good exercise. Start slowly with a few warm-up exercises and stretches first. Start with a 20 minute walk, then increase gradually.

Tom Simmons reflects back on his time in Eagle Grove

Former Park/Rec director here retires after 30-plus years

BY LES HOUSER SPORTS EDITOR

wrightcosports@gmail.com Tom Simmons recently retired after 30-plus years as the Clarion recreation director. Some of you may not know that he started out here in Eagle Grove in the same position for five years prior. He left rather suddenly after being offered that job, and feels now that he really didn't get a proper chance to say goodbye and to thank everyone who helped him achieve what he did here. He has chosen this as a way to do that.

Simmons came here from a two-year stint at Opportunity Village, where he even met the woman he would later marry. "They eventually moved me into the rec program there," he said. "I was not a swimmer myself, but I became a swim coach and actually helped one of my swimmers to four medals!" Soon he was applying for the position in Eagle Grove.

"Even though I had never been a fulltime park & recreation director before I wanted that job so bad," Simmons recalls. "It was in this area and a perfect fit for me." In November of 1979, he was hired here to replace the departing Steve Fischer. "I started from scratch, and for a time wondered 'what am I doing?' said Simmons. "It truly was a triai and error experience for me, but I had a lot of good people that rallied around me to help out. It turned out to be truly a great time in my life, and I still have a lot of fond memories of my time in Eagle Grove."

Simmons was a 1970 graduate of Clarion High School, and attended Iowa Central for two years followed by a year at DMACC. He graduated from Buena Vista in 1977 with a BA in physical education and an emphasis in recreation. His first office was at city hall, and by February of the following year he moved to an office adjacent to Dick Dyas in the Iowa Central

"Dick Dyas arranged the office move," relates Simmons. "He was very good to me, and treated me as his equal." In fact, Simmons added that the City rec department went in together with the community college to offer aerobic dance classes in that building. "I was also free to use empty classrooms for evening meetings to organize activities," added Simmons.

He organized adult gym nights over that winter, and also had one of his 'life highlight moments' that March when he won the senior heavyweight class at an old-timers wrestling tournament in Janesville. "I was a wrestler at both Clarion High and Iowa Central," said Simmons. "Lonnie Howell and I trained together by running the halls at Iowa Central every night. I finished in third, but actually tied the first place wrestler 1-1 in our match. That guy ended up being named the Most Outstanding Wrestler at the tournament."

He then started softball and baseball leagues for the youth that summer. A scoreboard column started appearing weekly in the Eagle, with game scores and current standings for Peewee, Midget and Junior Leagues and all compiled weekly by Simmons. "I also did the same for men's 3 on 3 basketball and adult volleyball leagues in the winter," he said. It could be safe to say that summer ball was his favorite time of year, as he could by busy doing something he truly enjoyed... grooming the fields. "It's one of the passions I've always had, and still enjoy today," said Simmons. "Even though it may seem like a mundane task, manicuring, dragging and chalking the fields was so much fun for me."

The summer of 1980 brought another highlight, as he got to prepare the field that the Eagle Grove Merchants fast pitch softball team would use to take on the well-known 'King & his Court' traveling team. "The Merchants played a good game, but they just couldn't beat Eddie Feigner and his four-man team," said Simmons. The following summer brought with it a busy than usual time for Simmons, as it was also the year of the Eagle Grove Centennial.

"Park/Rec provided a number of activities for the celebration," recalls Simmons. "A highlight for me was making two separate trips to Des Moines to appear first on the Dolph Pulliam Show, and then on the Duane and Floppy Show, to promote the centennial activities." The long list of events for centennial-goers included both a cow chip and frying pan throw, horseshoe and archery tournaments, a century bike ride, swim events at the pool, radio-controlled model airplanes and a mini-Olympics. There were also softball and baseball tournaments for youth on up to old-timers and an allcomers track meet. "One of my favorites was the cow chip throw," said Simmons. "Don Callen was the Methodist minister at the time, and he gave me a name of a guy in Oklahoma that would provide cow chips. He sent them by UPS in a big box. We broke off small pieces and put them on plaques for the winners. We had a rule that you could not lick your fingers between throws." Simmons was always thinking about the youngest of the children, and tried to tailor activities to their ability as well. "I had qualified leaders offering summer arts & crafts, low competition games and other special events for girls and boys 5-15," he said. "I had softball for grades 3-8 age girls, with all participants playing and learning the fundamentals of the game. The 2-8 grade boys could learn and develop their baseball skills. Again, all participants were guaranteed of playing in each game." He also started a weekly fun and healthy activity called 'Follow the Yellow Brick Road.' "It was an exercise and walking program for all ages one night a week at Greenwood Park," said Simmons.

He fondly recalls when there was an Eagle Grove Blues men's amateur baseball team. consisting of players with either high school, college or junior college experience. "These were talented players from surrounding communities," he said. "We were part of a league and played on Sunday afternoons, and we hosted our games at Greenwood Park. George Miller was head coach and I was his assistant. Zip Tanner was the home plate umpire for all home games."

Another thrill for him was a trip to the old Metrodome in Minneapolis. "It was during baseball season, and Jim Wallace (former Eagle sports editor), my cousins John and Steve and I took a trip up there to visit Dick Erickson, who was the head of the grounds crew," said Simmons. "I had about an hour with him, and he showed me his equipment. The other three got to go out into the outfield and watch the players warm up." Soon it was time for Erickson to chalk the field in preparation for the game. "He sent us to visit the guy who was in charge of running all the technical equipment they use inside the dome. We enjoyed a good game and a good time with them." Winter programs also kept him busy as the activities moved indoors. Those included men's basketball for either threeplayer or five-player teams, coed church or women's league volleyball and open gym adult volleyball. "When I left in January 1985, we had 17 total teams participating in the women's volleyball league," said Simmons proudly. "I enjoyed being a part of both shuffleboard and exercises classes for senior citizens." A memento that means a lot to him is an autographed photo of Dan Gable, even though he never got to meet him! "He was a guest speaker at the wrestling banquet so I got real excited," said Simmons. "However, I had to supervise co-ed church volleyball league so I had Jim Wallace get me the autographed photo. I still have that picture signed by Mr. Gable!"

In January of 1985, Simmons resigned his position here to take the same job in Clarion. He must have left quite an impression in the community, according to an editorial piece written by then Eagle owner/ publisher John Neibergall. He wrote, in part, "Tom Simmons is going to be missed in Eagle Grove. He brought unbounded enthusiasm to the job, backing it up with an energetically full slate of activities year-round. In his words the decision 'was maybe the toughest one in my life because Eagle Grove has been so good to me.' Tom has been good to Eagle Grove too. He credits the 'people who have volunteered to make the programs succeed."

In February of that year, Lori Hawn was introduced as the new park/rec director for the city. "I have heard Tom is highly respected in the community, and so I want to carry on what he accomplished and build from there," said Hawn. Big shoes to fill, but it sounded like she was up for the challenge! As for Simmons, he was grateful for everyone who helped him out during those years as they were truly the ones who made it all work. In fact, a few of them shared their thoughts on Simmons for this story.

Tom is the best of the best," stated Mel Sampson. "He related to both kids and parents well. He was energetic, fair and personable. We hated to see him go to Clarion."

"During Tom's employment in Eagle Grove, he asked me to help him lay out the ball diamonds with our survey equipment," stated Ladell Olson. "I also went to Clarion to help him when base sockets had pulled out of the ground. Tom was hard to keep up with as he ran from one spot to the next. I always enjoyed talking with him about area sports and especially wrestling. I wish him well in his retirement."

"There are several things I can tell you about Tom," stated Joe Chamberlin. "The first words I would use are high energy. It seemed that Tom never walked. He always seemed to run to where he was going. Another thing I remember about Tom is how he treated people. He was always kind and treated people with respect, which wasn't always easy as a parks & rec director. Tom was also always hard working. If you wanted to do an activity for kids, he was always there to help. He was so good with the kids he worked

"God has blessed me with a wonderful and understanding wife as well, so that I could serve others in the Eagle Grove community", said Simmons in closing. Well said Tom, and the community appreciated what you did. Enjoy your retirement, you have earned it!

Wright County Shooters open their season schedule

After a month's delay, the Wright County Shooting Association was able to get their competition going on May 31 at the gun range east of Clarion on Reed Avenue. Lynn Barz reports it was a good day. "Everybody brought their guns out," he said. "We had nine shooters and 21 total guns. Also had a new shooter, Mark Thompson. COVID-19 was not going to stop us this time."

In the limited class, Mike Townsend was the winner with 179 total points in a time of 36.84. He had no penalties for a final score of 4.858. Second went to Cody Larue with 162 points in 37.42. He had 20 in penalties for a score of 3.794. Third went to Denny Mraz with 182 points in 55.38. He had 20 in penalties for a score of 2.925. Others in the class were L. Barz (2.890), Jennilee Townsend (2.712), Pat Star (1.771), Jason Barz (1.750), Brian Bangs

In the open class, it was Larue in first with 174 points in 35.67. He drew 10 in penalties for a score of 4.597. Second was M. Townsend with 188 points in 34.59. He had 30 in penalties for 4.567. Taking third was J. Townsend with 170 points in 48.36. She had 20 in penalties for a score of 3.101. Others in the class were Bangs (2.762) and L. Barz (2.598). In the optic class, it was

M. Townsend with 183 points in 34.83 for the win. He had 40 in penalties for a score of 4.105. Second went to Larue with 178 points in 38.44. He had 30 in penalties for a score of 3.850. Third went to L. Barz with 178 points in 57.45. He had 10 in penalties for a score of 2.924. Also competing was J. Townsend (2.803). There were no revolvers in competition.

The next event is June 28, and new shooters whether experienced or novice are always welcome!

she finally did a Google search and found the application process. Unfortunately, they weren't accepting any entries at the time. When she checked in a while later for the second time, she was delighted to see they were, but her nerves kept her from filling out the form.

"It might sound cheesy, but the current situation of the world was a push for me," admitted Johnston about finally submitting her application for season three. "In this time of uncertainty, family and personal happiness has become more important than ever and when I randomly checked their website again one day to see that casting was still open, I just kind of thought, 'Why not?' and mentioned it to my husband (Kyle), and he said 'Yes, do it."

A second motivation came from her older brother, Travis Horn. He grew up a professional wrestling fan who found a way to make his way into the sport as well now as an

"I had no idea how a person can just decide one day that they are going to try and do that, especially here in Iowa, but he has worked hard and found some great opportunities and success through it and that made me feel like I should never hold myself back from taking these steps of pursuing my dream," said Johnston.

Now all that's left is the waiting...waiting to see if they call and give her the news she's been day-dreaming about hearing since she first saw the show. And by the way, she said she's watched every single episode from the start, some more than once.

"All of the contestants on there seem to have different types of arts or crafts that they specialize in or enjoy most, and they are all insanely creative and kind," noted Johnston. "Even though it is a competition, you can tell they all get along and are truly rooting for each other. Some of the ideas they have for crafts on there are not things I would have ever thought of, but I feel so inspired by it all. Each week, when someone is sent home, all of the contestants cry, and I cry right along with them from home."

Johnston admits that just in case she does get her shot at "Making It," she's been storing up some ideas in her head.

"I have tried to think with each of the challenges as I watch the show what I would do if I was given that challenge? It is so overwhelming to even think about, and some of the ideas I have seen on the show have encouraged me to try to really think out-of-the-box, even more than I already do,' she said. "Now that I have actually taken the step to apply, my mind is constantly with racing ideas.'

 $W\ h\ i\ l\ e$ everyone who knows Johnston excited for her and waiting with anticipation for the phone call, there were three people who were not thrilled...in the beginning. She said her three kids, ages eight, five, and almost two, did not want their mom to leave if she was cast in the show, because it tapes in California. That all changed when their dad, Kyle (who Johnston said is always a huge supporter of hers) told them that if she got on, they would get to watch their mommy on television and cheer her on.

"They thought that was pretty cool," she said.

It seems as though Johnston has been preparing for this opportunity her whole life, as being creative seems to run in the family.

"I think I just kind of had a knack from the start. I grew up in a house with very creative, artistic parents. Whether they were painting things, creating cool stuff for the garden, or coming up with amazing outfits for dress up days at school, I quickly learned to appreciate how inventive they could be," she said.

There were always bright cans of spray paint her father had sitting around. Her mom was "the queen" of reusing stuff she could find around the house. Her brother and sister also enjoyed arts projects, so it's no wonder she fell in love with the hobby too. Johnston took every art class she could throughout high While she enjoys a variety of projects and mediums, her favorite type of art is working with paint pens, and she uses them often for her creations for her home business, "Artsy Mama." She uses them to hand write on canvas, wood, glass, ornaments...and is willing to try whatever it is her customers want. Last Christmas, she even hosted her first sip and paint class where she invited others to come and > relax, enjoy each other's company, and try their hand guided canvas painting.

"A few back, years I set up with other vendors at Summerfest Eagle Grove and I blown was away by the response, so I have started to do vendor here events and there when I am able." said Johnston her Mama business. "It is a huge bonus to live in great communities where I can get my name out."

She has also set up an Etsy store that she is dabbling with. Kyle has also found a passion for being creative. Last year he decided to give woodworking a try, creating a wooden coffee table with a blue epoxy "river" running through it. He calls his business "Deathly Hallow customs" as he is a major Harry Potter fan. He has displayed some of this items along with his wife's during vendor shows she has participated in. Even their three children, which is no surprise, have developed a love

"I really love that everyone in our house enjoys being crafty so it is something we can do together," Johnston said.

In the daytime hours, Johnston keeps busy working as a family development specialist with Upper Des Moines Opportunity. She works in-home with families, helping them set goals to achieve self-sufficiency. She has also been teaching dance some evenings for the past six years and is currently teaching at CDTA in Humboldt.

"It feel so great to have people enjoy my arts and crafts enough that they want to display them in their home or business. When people contact me and say they saw something they liked and wonder if I would make it for them, it is a huge honor. I love feeling like I found my talent and that I can share that with others," said Johnston.

Now, she just hopes she can share that passion for creating in front of a national audience as part of "Making It." Either way, contestant or not, this small-town girl has already made it big in the eyes of the people who know her and have her work on display in their own homes and businesses.

Johnston encourages each of us to give crafting a try. Creativity lives in all of us.

"If you watch even one episode of "Making It," you are bound to come up with some ideas you want to try.

If Johnston does make it on one of her favorite television shows, she would be in the running to win $100,000 and be named the "Master Maker." Johnston said if that dream came true, she would love to move her family into a bigger house where they could equip the ultimate workshop and crafting spaces for her and her husband, and of course, their budding little artists that are following in their footsteps.
